Each student has his own picture of a professor. Some students may remember a professor for the "impossible" tests he gave. Some may laughingly recall the corny jokes he related each day in class. Others may recall the day when, after making an 18 on a major test, they were told that all hope was not lost for that B at the end of the quarter. Still others may recall a teacher because they remember realizing one day that this professor was not only human, but "down right nice." In whatever manner a student visualizes his professors, it is obvious that, no matter what, this institute of learning could not continue without them.

At this time, the club has three black belts in its rolls and expects several more within the next academic year. New students may begin practice of Judo at any time during the year; it is not begun anew with each quarter but is an on-going process of instruction.

The Gamma Tau chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority participates in various activities during the year. They received recognition in 1973-74 by winning for the second consecutive year the scholastic award for the female Greek organization. The sorority also had the most participants in the Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) road rally and, for the past two years, the highest percentage of members to participate in the blood drive. The group also sponsored the Toys for Tots Drive.

Alpha Tau Omega started the year off with a bang. Rush parties, pajama parties, Halloween costume parties, hayrides, and an annual Luau party all add to the excitement surrounding the ATO's. With the addition of the "Dirty Dozen" pledges, the ATO's foresee a bright future. On the more serious side of the fraternity, the brothers actively support all student organizations, the Muscular Dystrophy Foundation, blood drives, and the Walk for Mankind. The ATO's have excelled in intramural sports and academics.

After welcoming sixteen girls into pledgeship fall quarter, Chi Omega raised money for the Carrollton Crisis Center and celebrated Christmas with their annual White Carnation Ball.

The "All Greek" trophy from the Spring '74 TKE Road Rally and second place trophy from the sorority division of homecoming float competition were added to the Chi O collection of awards this year. Every spring Chi Omega is active in Greek Week. They also give an Easter Egg Hunt for faculty children. Through hard work this sorority has formed a close bond of sisterhood under the X and Horseshoe.

NATIONAL BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS

The West Georgia College Braves turned in their fifth straight winning campaign at the conclusion of the 1974-75 regular season. It also marked the fourth straight year that the Braves had compiled the top collegiate basketball record in the state of Georgia. The defending NAIA National Champions, Georgia's first national basketball titlists, opened the schedule with a smashing 93-67 win over the University of Maryland-Eastern Shore, a quarterfinalist last season in the NIT. After suffering three early season losses, West Georgia reeled off 11 straight wins, averaging more than 90 points per game in the process. Rated as high as seventh in an early season Associated Press poll, the Braves tied for their second straight South Atlantic Conference regular season championship with an 8-2 mark. However, WGC fell to Armstrong State 74-72 in overtime and dropped the conference tournament title in Savannah. West Georgia, which placed all five starters in double figures, was led by 6-3 guard Dave Edmonds, the lone returning starter from last season's national championship squad and the 1974-75 team captain. The New York City native, who was selected to the 1974 NAIA National All-Tournament team, averaged 19.4 points during his senior season and was selected to numerous preseason All-American teams, as was running mate Tony Stroud. As a team, the Braves averaged 88.7 points and allowed an average of only 74.3 for a win margin of 14.4. During the past five years West Georgia basketball teams have been ranked among the nation's elite, compiling a cumulative mark of 112 wins and 32 losses during head coach Roger Kaiser's tenure, giving him the nation's fourth best active record (percentage). Also during the past season the Braves ran their consecutive win streak at home to 23, including 54 wins in 55 home contests since 1970, one of the best marks in the nation. After viewing both the Valdosta State game in which the Braves took a double overtime 89-85 decision and the homecoming bout with Armstrong State which was won 97-86, an Atlanta sportswriter called the West Georgia crowd the "best basketball fans in the state . . . simply incredible!" The Braves drew more than 3,500 for the Valdosta game and a record 4,100 for homecoming, all within a gym that officially seats 3,000. At presstime West Georgia had accepted a bid to the NCAA South Central Regional in New Orleans. A win in Louisiana would send the Braves to Evansville, Indiana for the National Tournament and a shot at a second straight national championship.

Lady Braves Basketball

The combined efforts of Coach Dot McNabb and Coach Sandra Raye have produced one of the finest women's basketball teams that West Georgia has ever seen. The Lady Braves have accomplished much even against the odds. With Coach McNabb busy with committee meetings, Coach Raye came over to help out a little. She was more than just a little help. She took the team to quite a few seasonal games, but none of them was as exciting as the one with Mercer at the coliseum. Mercer labeled it as an upset, and they were upset. It was the first time in four years that Mercer's ladies had been defeated in the coliseum. The Lady Braves did not slow down after that, even when one of their starting girls was injured and could not play. They made the trip to Columbus for the state tournament, playing four games in two days and winning all of them.

The members of the women's volleyball team, coached by Dot McNabb, are heroes in their own way. The women do not let this influence their game too much because Coach McNabb stresses the value of good team play rather than individual glorification. Coach McNabb has emphasized the importance of hard work, and it seems to have paid off again for her team. This year the women's volleyball team ended its season with a record of 57 wins and 9 losses. Two of these nine losses came when the team met Mississippi State University on the court. However, the women defeated MSU when they met again in region playoffs.

The 1975 Braves are a completely new team except for about five players. Last year's team was 36 and 12 and led the conference in hitting and fielding. Last year's team defeated Virginia, Maryland, Wake Forest, and Georgia Tech. This year West Georgia has 43 games scheduled. Henry Mays and Rick Camp, who both played last year, have signed professional contracts. According to Coach White, the team may be "green," but its members are willing to work.
